Liberator Staff

What a mess! Nobody could make anything out of that, could they? But here it is, just the same, thanks to the services of ... Jade Yunkman ...

... Editor Debbie Schrock (seen from both sides) and Ruth Garlick, not to mention the invaluable photographic services of Jay Sinclair (caught working).

plus the occasional services of Sharon Rowe and Judy Jones.

Out of their long hours and low pay has come THE 1972 LIBERATOR. Thank them.

As you can see from the picture at left, there were other awards won than the John Philip Sousa award which went to Rozona Kelemen and the Orchestra award which went to Jade Yunkman. They are shown above with Stuart Glazer, student director, Mr. Bowman, and Mr. Emil Walters, president of the Band Boosters whose money-raising made possible many activities which would otherwise have been curtailed. As it was the award-winning Orchestra could not go to the State Festival.

Thespians

The Drama Club accomplished three activities during the course of this year: They produced two fine plays and converted themselves into a newly chartered section of the Thespians, membership in which was gained by the performance of a sufficient number of rated activities to qualify, whether by performing or by assisting backstage.

The first play was Ayn Rand's "The Night of January 16th," a courtroom drama in which members of the audience act as a jury to determine whether the accused murderess, Karen Andre (Debbie Fowler) is guilty of murdering her employer. She was defended by Joyce Arnett and prosecuted by Philip Hunt. Interestingly enough, she was found guilty one night and innocent the other. Other parts were: Keith Woods as a gangster, Ernie Terry as a banker, and witnesses Linda Adkins, Tony Bates, Rosalind Duncans, Bernadette Moore, Mark Mallory, Gary Roome, Sharon Rowe, Debbie Schrock, Greg Swisher, and Joe Yekulis.

The other play was Arthur Halley's "Flight into Danger" in which because of the illness of the pilot from food poisoning it becomes necessary for one of the passengers to take over and fly the plane to its destination. Featured in the play were: Philip Hunt, Ernie Terry, Donna Giezentaner, Debbie Schrock, Alexandra Walker, Toni Boelter, Sara Shoner, Joe Yekulis, Linda Adkins, Linda McClary, Kerry Fournier, Steve Ellis, Lynn Pargo, Marcie Borgman, Dave McPherson, Gary Roome, Mark Mallory, Donna Smith and Randy Palmer.

Mrs. Guernsey, drama instructor and director of these activities, whose schoolday attire betrayed on several occasions the fact that a new play was in the making, is to be highly complimented on the performances of her players.

Junior-Senior

Shown here are Mr. Andon, class sponsor, and class president Bob Davis, addressing a capacity crowd at the banquet held this year for the first time at Weber's. After the eating came Laurel and Hardy and dancing. Needless to say, a good time was had by all.

Steve Ellis, Ben Czinski with friends.

Banquet And Prom

Held at the Crystal House Motel on May 19th (another first for this innovative, and wealthy, class) the prom was an unqualified success as you can plainly see.
